FROM DR NORRIS

Dr Benjamin Norris was invited to lunch with the Prime Minister, Julia Gillard, recently at Parliament House in Canberra. The purpose of the lunch was to be received by the Samoan Prime Minister who was paying a State visit at the time as a guest of the Australian Government.

Dr Norris

The Samoan Prime Minister had specifically requested an audience with doctors and health professionals who had taken part in the recovery program from the tsunami his country had suffered. Dr Norris has strong ties with Samoa. His wife is part Samoan and both he and his wife regularly do volunteer work in Samoa as part of the Interplast program.

Dr Norris witnessed a new agreement between Samoa and Australia aimed at improving sporting ties, and was given a gift by the Samoan Prime Minister in the form of a treatise made up of letters written by the author Robert Louis Stevenson and his family during the years they spent in Samoa, and during which time the author wrote his greatest novels. Dr Norris also took the opportunity to liaise with the new Consul General from Australia to Samoa and AusAid staff to continue their efforts in helping the Interplast program in Samoa.

Dr Norris remains the country coordinator for Interplast in Samoa at this time and has recently spent 2 weeks there operating on patients who would otherwise not have access to plastic and reconstructive surgery services. For more information on Interplast's work or to make a donation see www.interplast.com.au

In the past few years we have been using these “super-fillers” to volumise and lift the whole face; but the mid-face, in particular, offers the best visual impact and value for money. It is changing the way we treat the face of today.

BRING ON THE REVOLUTION!

Current trends indicate that mid-cheek volumising and mid-face sculpting is a simplified answer for a more complex problem occurring in an aging face.

For some, it may buy valuable time in the postponement of, or even the eventual need for, facial surgery. As we age, our bone, fat and muscle continue to diminish in volume leaving the skin to sag and head south. The face essentially drops or flattens out causing loose skin to crease and cause more wrinkles, hollows and folds. In youth, our face is full and plump, our cheeks are defined with a beautiful apple in the centre, our jawline is crisp, defined from the neck, our under eyes are full and not hollowed out.

Until recently the only approach used to treat mid-face volume loss was surgery, with a face-lift or permanent cheek implants, both of which may have short and/or long-term complications. Fat transfers are another traditional method used to lift the mid-face; however problems with uneven or unpredictable reabsorption may occur, with or without associated facial surgical procedures.

What we love about re-volumising the mid-face is the relative affordability, with little or no down-time, that results in a very natural-looking outcome. You choose as little or as much as you need, when you need it. The cheeks can be treated with minimal entry points using either a sharp needle or blunt cannula. The products used can be easily moulded and sculpted to create a natural look and feel, with a blended enhancement to the face. This is perfect for restoring youthful facial curves. Under eye volumising can also be achieved with or without cheek volumising.

The global facial rejuvenation revolution is not just about combining muscle relaxants, dermal fillers and volumisers. It is about refining lines, lifting curves and contours, as well as volumising the ageing, hollowed, divots and craggy areas and creating a smoother, more freshened natural appearance to your face.
